

Abstract

A dynamically loadable stub module, associated with a dynamically loadable kernel module (DLKM) includes a base stub module, means for defining DLKM data structures and wrapper functions, means for defining load and unload routines, means for defining 5 metadata structures, means for allowing dynamic loading by DLKM infrastructures, and means for generating a dynamically loadable stub module object file.